BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Most Unitarian Universalist, I suspect, began their spiritual journey as did I in a Christian church of some variety. During my 55 years of membership in a UU congregation, I have seen the UUA transform from an organization deeply rooted in the Christian tradition, albeit with a couple of twists, to an Association of spiritual seekers committed to a set of core values, which we call our seven principles. For a variety of reasons, both social and cultural, I believe that former members of traditional Christian faiths, both Protestant and Catholic, will continue to constitute the majority of UU membership well into the foreseeable future.

In that same past half century, as the UUA has become increasingly welcoming to a diversity of religious thought, some Christian denominations have become increasingly doctrinaire and exclusive. Many of us raised in churches which were noncreedal, emphasized the individual's liberty of conscience, and championed the separation of church and state hardly recognize the denomination of our youth.

As this change has occurred in some denominations, in large part because of a secular media, rigid fundamentalist Christians have come to be viewed by many as representative of the Christian faith. And since many of us UUs left our original faith because of aspects of it we could no longer accept, we are sometimes more susceptible to this conflation than perhaps we should be. But fundamentalists are not the sole representative of Christianity, and our former faiths have often served us well, and continue to do so.

For many of us, it was our former faiths that instilled our basic moral and ethical values, that taught us to respect the dignity of all persons, that awakened our sense of social justice, that promoted in us a sense of the divine. Even in the South of the 1950s, it was the African American Christian church that powered the civil rights movement, aided in no small measure by white allies from Catholic, mainline Protestant, and even evangelical clergy and congregations. And both Catholic and Protestant congregations have played, and continue to play, a major role in the social justice movement, ministering to the many in need in our society.

So, let us as UUs hold fast to the values instilled in former congregations, recognize the contributions of Christian institutions to our larger society, and reject the false notion that fundamentalists are representative of all Christianity.

MINISTER'S MUSINGS

Love is a gift. When we give it, our hearts are enlarged. When we receive it our souls are enriched. When we give love, our hearts are enriched. When we give love our souls are enlarged. Whether we receive or give love our lives are better. There are many kinds of love that we can receive or give. There is romantic love, there is familial love, there is friendship love, there is universal love and there is self-love. There may be more types of love, but I think these are the ones that are most familiar to us. No matter what type of love we give and/or receive we are better for it.

Love is endless. I don't think we ever stop loving someone if we ever did love them. We may not like them, but once we give our love I don't think we ever truly take it back. There is still some part of us that loves the person. Even when a person dies we still love them and we still feel the love they gave us. Love is truly the gift that keeps on giving.

Love is abundant. There is no limit to the amount of love we have. Unlike some resources such as time and money, love does not have a finite quantity. We have an abundant quantity of love to give. We can be as generous as we can with love, because no matter how much you give, there is still more you can give. And no matter how much you receive there is more that can be received. The more love you give the more love you receive.

Love is necessary. We know we need food and water and shelter to survive, but we need love to thrive. Babies who do not experience love through caring touch will not grow and many will die. Without love, even at the earliest of ages, we do not feel the need to continue living. Love is not a luxury, it is a necessity.

Love has many ways to express itself. It is a word of kindness and affirmation to someone who needs one. It is a gentle touch, a hug, given to someone who wants one. It is doing a little thing for someone because you can. It is wanting to do for someone what they would have you do for them. Love says to someone you matter.

Love is the mission of the church. It may not be in our mission statement and we may not consciously think of it as part of our mission; but if the church is to mean anything in our lives it must first and foremost be a place where we experience love. It must be a place where we can give love and where we can receive love. Where we are loved for who we are, just as we are. Ultimately this is the fundamental purpose of the church.

I love you, now and forever.

Rev. Cheryl

RE Reflections

Do you know what VBS is? It stands for ‘Vacation Bible School’. I didn’t know that until I’d moved from the northeast to North Carolina when I was in eighth grade. But I learned about it quickly, because as I was trying to make new friends in a very foreign environment, and I realized even kids old enough to drive and have part-time jobs and to be preparing for the SATs were expected to spend at least one week each summer in VBS.

I had had plenty of classmates and friends growing up in New Jersey who went to Catechism or Hebrew School but not so much this thing called Vacation Bible School. I didn’t think much about it until I began raising my own children in NC and recognizing that we, as a family, were really missing out on an equivalent of VBS for our more liberal religion. It doesn’t hurt for children AND adults to have a booster shot of faith occasionally – there is more to religious education than what we do on Sunday mornings.

I know that families start planning summer vacations and day care arrangements right about now, and the VBS signs are going up right on cue – I passed three of them just today. So I thought I’d remind everyone that we DO have summer camp options for UU kids – and adults! Please, seriously consider including one of these camps in your family plans. And only one of these listings is for children only – the information can be used by adults, too!

SUUSI: <https://www.suusi.org/> SUUSI stands for Southeastern Unitarian Universalist Summer Institute. For over 63 years, SUUSI has met for one week in summer for the second largest annual assembly of UUs! The theme for 2019 will be ‘Sacred Spaces’ and will meet July 14-20. The words on their website describe it so much better than I could. Importantly, know that there are both multigenerational activities for the whole family to enjoy and adult workshops/seminars for parents while children enjoy their own age-appropriate gatherings – get great quality time with the family and alone time for yourself! SUUSI meets at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, NC – in the Great Smokey Mountains.

Shelter Neck: <http://shelterneckuucamp.org/> Shelter Neck is located outside Burgaw, NC about 50 minutes from our congregational home. I am still trying to confirm summer camp plans, as Shelter Neck experienced extensive damage from Hurricane Florence. 2019 dates as currently noted are June 30-July 6 for rising 6th graders to 13 year olds and July 7-13 for teens aged 14-17. The theme this year is ‘Awe and Wonder’. This is a great camp for a first ‘over-night’ camp experience due to its relative proximity and the fact that your child will be with other UUs. Both of my boys insisted on returning to this camp each summer after their first attendance, and my youngest is hoping to volunteer as a counselor this year.

The Mountain: <https://themountainrlc.org/retreats/> The Mountain Retreat & Conference Center is located in Highlands, NC. There are year-round events held in this beautiful, rustic place. For 2019, children’s camps start around the week of June 8th, and there are many to choose from.

CU2C2: <http://www.cu2c2.org/>: Stands for Conference of Unitarian Universalist Camps and Conferences and it’s a UUA-related directory of UU camps all over the country – great if you’re traveling this summer.

UU’re Home: <https://uurehome.com/joomla/> This is a terrific resource if you enjoy staying in B&B’s when traveling, instead of standard hotels or camping. There is a network of UU’s who own and operate Bed & Breakfasts all over the US and abroad. There is a $10.00 annual fee for access to their directory, so consider it while you’re making travel plans for the summer.

Don’t forget the bug spray!

Shalom,
Leslie O’Connor

Full Moon Gathering for February 2019

February's full moon is named, the Snow Moon for the large amount snow on the ground. As the North American tribes experienced scarcity of food sources and difficult hunting conditions with the snow, the tribes also gave the this moon the name Hunger Moon or the Storm Moon.

The February Full Moon gathering will be on Tuesday evening February 19 at 7:00pm at the home of Kami O. Our High Priestess will be Kathryn W. As always, we will be celebrating our womanhood and the goddess that influence us and our homes especially during the Full Moons.

All women of any age are welcomed to these gatherings. However, if you plan to attend, please RSVP to the Full Moon's email address, fullmoon@uufwilmington.org. This website can also be used for any questions or for information about the Full Moon gatherings.

SHARE THE PLATE

Half the "Plate" Makes a Whole Lot of Difference!

Two years ago, Eden Avery, Sally Freeman, Joyce Elliott, and Reverend Cheryl introduced the Share the Plate program. It awards half of each week's collection plate proceeds to an organization that is working to meet a need in our local community, or joins in partnership with a broader UUA initiative. We have already supported 39 organizations by gifting more than $25,000. Happy birthday STP!!

Who should we support this year? Perhaps you volunteer for a non-profit group that could do even more with a little extra funding. Maybe you would like to give back to an organization that helped in a time of need. Do you wish you could make a larger financial contribution towards a project protecting our natural resources? With more than 1,000 non-profit organizations in Wilmington alone, we need your input to identify those that are effectively supporting the well-being of our community.

Just fill out one (or two or three) of the nomination forms that can be found on a bulletin board in Dobkin Hall and drop it in the STP envelope, which is also there. Any questions or suggestions can be directed to the 2019 team:
