The Slow Death of DEI

with Daniel Wegener

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion are considered by many to be fundamental American values. Efforts to make these values a reality for all have their roots in the Civil Rights movement. For decades, DEI training programs have focused on making DEI a reality in education, business, and government. However, recent efforts to push back these efforts have dominated the national debate. We will discuss why this is happening and why it matters.

Daniel Wegener is a retired educator and administrator with experience in Central America and with the United Nations. His degree in anthropology and his international career in education spurred his deep interest in social justice.

He has facilitated a Quest Discussion on WOKE and Intersectionality. He will be teaching an OLLI course on DEI this month at UNCW.
